There's been bit of attention on Andrew Neil in last few days, so some background. "Mad cat woman" actually culmination of 2+ years of attacks. It was direct lift from Arron Banks. And it launched misogynist meme into mainstream. From where it's never left

<https://t.co/m0LzvZ3wDF>

The 'cat lady' abuse is highly sexualised. It's intended to shame. A UNESCO report proved Arron Banks originated it & Neil accelerated it. I wrote this down because I hit brick wall at BBC. Zero comprehension of how misogyny is used to target & silence female journalists <https://t.co/41TpiWbUpq>

Neil, Guido & the Spectator all parrot the same lines. With Banks protected throughout. Here's Guardian headline when our reporting helped find LeaveEU was in breach of the law. And here's Guido & Neil: "conspiracies" "crushed"

The Information Commissioner's Office has found "no evidence of a working relationship between Cambridge Analytica and Leave.EU" beyond "preliminary discussions". Another beautiful conspiracy theory bludgeoned by brutal, ugly facts.

This is what Neil's tweet unleashed. And @BBC legitimised this misogyny failing its own female journalists.

But I have bigger questions. Neil ran interference for Arron Banks. Especially over Russia. We can see that now. But BBC also followed his & r/w media's lead <https://t.co/bIAMH2RwZw>

When @guardian & @sundaytimes reported on Banks's meetings with Russian ambassador, BBC didn't cover it. It didn't cover Banks's lawsuit over this reporting. It didn't cover new evidence that came out during the trial. It's never critically covered Farage.

This public acceptance of misogyny must now end. Because it damages us all. This abuse from Neil, Banks, Guido - explicitly echoed & amplified by Russian media - was allowed, accepted, enabled.

And biggest harm was not to me. But the reporting of these vital issues. Even now.

The Kremlin's talking points about me & this investigation were directly echoed by r/w media. I can find dozens of eggs of RT & Spectator & Guido & Sputnik coping & reinforcing each other.

Again: this is not about me. It's about silencing & chilling this reporting. And it worked <https://t.co/iVrVgVWHVL>

Here's why I understand the Kremlin's information warfare strategy so clearly. Because I'm a target of it. I haven't just been reporting on it. I've been living it.

And the r/w media has been the Kremlin's friend. Which in turn has toxified & crippled our entire media landscape.

Brexiteer Arron Banks is celebrating a win against The Observer investigator Carole Cadwalladr, who reportedly admitted in court filings that her claims that money for the Leave campaign came from Russia lacked any evidence.

She has tried various legal tactics to get out of producing evidence to back up her claims that Banks had a secret relationship with the Russians and benefited from their backing. Something she has long intimated without providing any hard evidence.
